President Makes Emphatic Declaration at Fair.

* DEFINES PLANS IN SPEECH

Will Not Tolerate Abuses, but Will Preserve the Institution of Private Property-Keeps Eye on Wrongdoing Whether by Mob or Corporation-Address Thoroughly American

In his speech at the opening of the Jamestown Exposition yesterday, Presito the present-day prosperity and the necessity of combination both in the world of capital and in the world of labor. He said that "each kind of combination can do good, and yet each, however powerful, must be opposed when it does ill.

At the outset I wish to say a word of

They have come to assist us in celebrating what was in very truth the birthday of this nation, for it was here that the colonists first settled, whose incoming, whose growth from their own loins and by the addition of newcomers from abroad, was to make the people which one hundred and sixty-nine years later assumed the solemn responsibilities and weighty duties of complete independence. In welcoming all of you I must say a special word, first to the representative of the people of Great Britain and Ire- resumed the Scotch- man came later, but standance. Finally, let me say a special word of greeting to those representatives of the Asiatic nations who make up that newest East which is yet the most ancient. East, the East of time immemorial. In particular, let me express a word of hearty welcome to the representative of the mighty island empire of Japan; that empire, which, in learning from the West, has shown that it had so much, so very much, to teach the West in return.

To all of you here gathered I express nay to believe that one antion can rise of your several nations. The world has moved so far that it is no longer necessary to believe that one antion can rise only by thrusting another down. All far-aighted statesmen, all true patriots, now earnestly wish that the leading nations of manking as in the rugged sternness of derivative and there all ways early each look "as through a glass darkly" at the other, we can all feel the same the risk, knardship, and totil of his hat the early years that there always exists a treat of lapsing back from civilization, and totil or he fealty toward the right as it was given to ach look "as through a glass darkly" at the other, we can all feel the same remained to ward the right as it was given to ach look "as through a glass darkly" at the other, we can all feel the same remained to pride in the valor, the devotion, and the solid residue to he fealty toward the right as it was given to ach look "as through a glass darkly" at the other, we can all feel the same remained to he they and toil of the fealty toward the right as it was given to ach look "as through a glass darkly" at the other, we can all feel the same remained to the two of a link. Moreover, both the Dutch and the Swedes were shortly to found colonies In the colonial period, and for at least between the two sets of English colonies, those that grew up around the Potomac and those that grew up on what is now the New England coast. Nevertheless, this landing at Jamestown possesses for us of the United States an altogether peouliar significance, and this without regard to our several origins. The men who landed at Jamestown and those who, hirteen years later, landed at Piymouth, all of English stock, and their fellowscutters, who during the next few decades streamed in after them, were those who took the lead in shaping the life history of this people in the colonial and Revolutionary days. It was they who bent into definite shape our nation while it was still young enough most easily, most readily, to take on the characteristics which were to become part of its permanent life habit.

Represent New Type.

Yet let us remember that while this early English colonial stock has left deeper than all others upon our national life its early English colonial stock, and entire the mark of its strong twin individualities, the mark of its strong twin individualities, the mark of the Strong twin individualities, the mark of the Strong twin individualities, the mark of the Cavalier and of the Puritan—nevertheless, this stock, not only from the environment but also from the presence with it of other stocks, almost from the beginning began to be differentiated strongly from any European people. As I have already said, about the the first English settlers landed here, the Frenchman and the Spaniard, international peace; a tide which it behooves us to guide through rational channels to sane conclusions; and all of us here present can well afford to take to heart St. Paul's counsel: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live

peaceably with all men."

First Permaneat Settlement.

We have met to-day to celebrate the opening of the Exposition, which itself
commemorates the first permanent settlement of men of our stock in Virginia, the first beginning of what has since become this mighty republe. Three hundred years ago a handrul of English adventurers, who had crossed the ocean in what we should now call cockle-hoats,
as clumby as they were frail, landed as in the great wooded wilderness, the Indianhaunted waste, which then stretched down to the waster's edge along the sure its not being used against the interest of the public, while yet permitting such ample legitimate profits as will encourage individual initiative. It is our business to put a stop to abuses and to prevent their recurrence, without showing a spirit of mere vindictiveness for what has been done in the past. In John Morley's brilliant sketch of Burke he lays especial stress upon the fact that Burke more than almost any other thinker or politician of his time realized the profound lesson that in politics we are concerned not with barren rights but with duties; not with abstract truth, but with practical morality. He especially eulogizes the way in which in his efforts for economic reform, Turke combined unshakable resolution in pressing the reform with a profound temperateness of spirit which made him, while bent on the extirpation of the evil system, refuse to cherish an unreasoning and vindictive ill will toward the men who had benefited by it. Said Burke, "If I cannot reform with equity, I will not reform at all * * (There is) a state to preserve as well as a state to reform."

Reform Corporate Wealth. This is the exact spirit in which this country should move to the reform of buses of corporate wealth. The wrongdoer, the man who swindles and cheats, whether on a big scale or a little one, as if he committed crimes of violence or brutality. We are unalterably, determined to prevent wrongdoing in the future; we have no intention of trying to wreak such an indiscriminate vengeance for wrongs done in the past as would confound the innocent with the guilty. Our purpose is to build up rather than to tear down. We show ourselves the truest friends of property when we make it evilaw, literature, the fund of their common thought, made an inheritance which all of us share, and marked deep the all of us share, and marked deep the lines along which we have developed. It was the men of English stock who did most in casting the mold into which our national character was run.

Let me furthermore greet all of you, there presentatives of the people of continental Europe. From almost every mation of Europe we have drawn some on Europe we have drawn some part of our blood, as gone on a kind of development unknown the beginning, and with it has gone on a kind of development unknown the beginning, and with it has gone on a kind of development unknown the way are fundamentally akin to, all of the nations of Europe.

Heartlest Friendship Pledged.

Again, let me bid you welcome. Friendship Pledged.

Again let me bid you welcome. Friendship Pledged.

Again, let me bid you welcome. Friends Again, let me bid you welcome, representatives of our sister republics of this continent. In the larger aspect, your interests and ours are inlarge part the same; and as we strive to settle them, I pledge you herewith on the part of this nation the heartlest friendship of the first bitter years have placed forever. Oh, my hearers, my fellow-countrymen, great in deed has been our good fortune; for as time clears away the mists that once shrough a glass darkly the other, we can all feel the same pride in the valor, the devotion, and the fealty toward the right as it was given to each to see the right, shown alike by the fealty toward the right as it was given to each to see the right, shown alike by the fealty toward the right as it was given to each to see the right, shown alike by the fealty toward the right as it was given to each to see the right, shown alike by the fealty toward the right as it was given to each to see the right, shown alike by the countrymen, great in deed has been our good fortune; for as time clears away the mists that once shrough a glass darkly.
